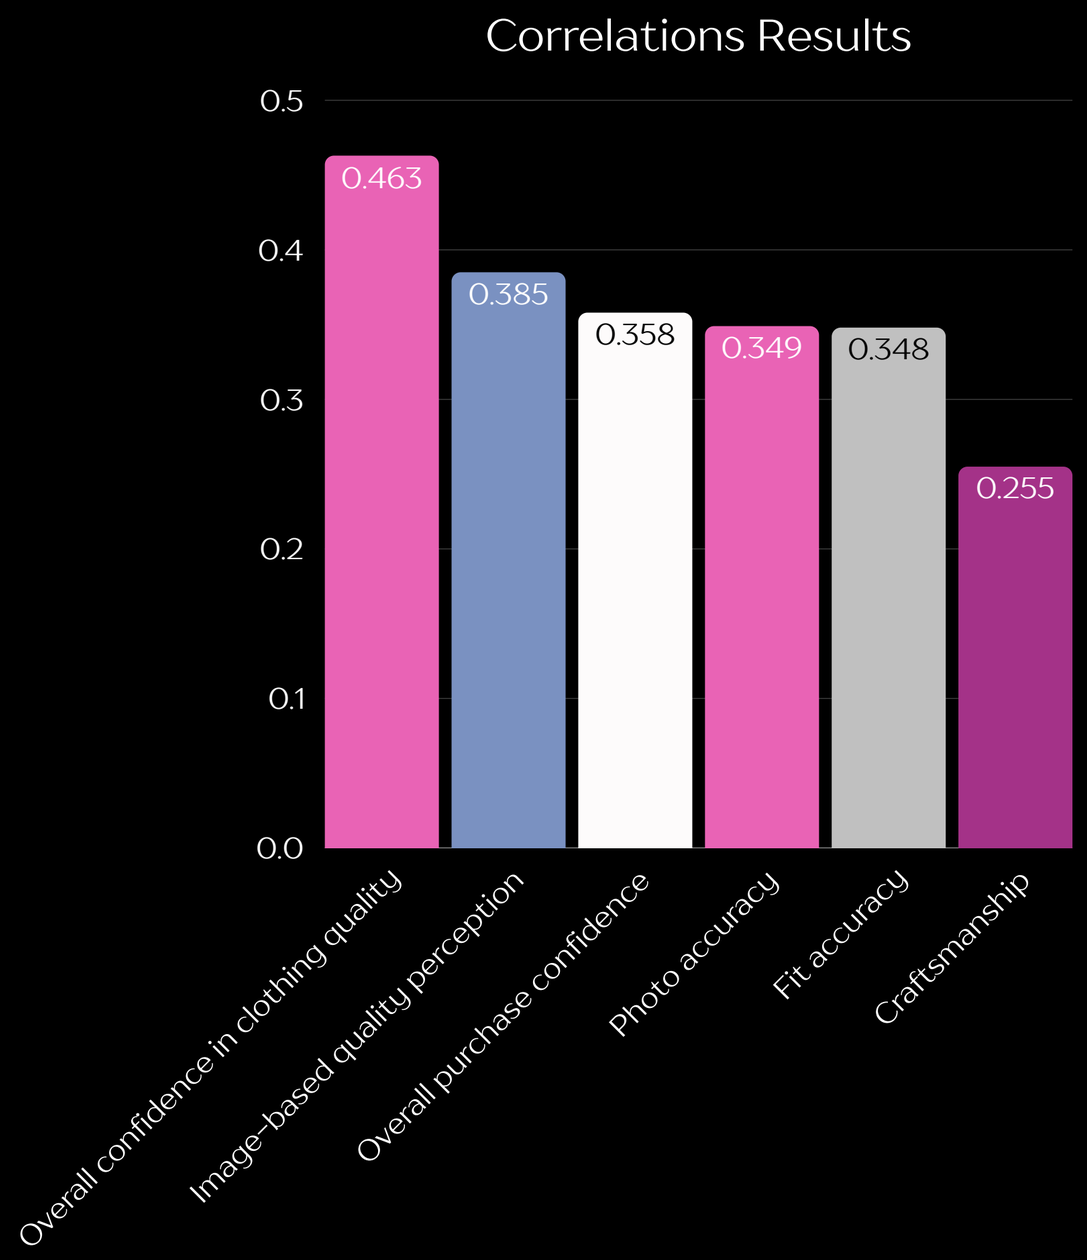
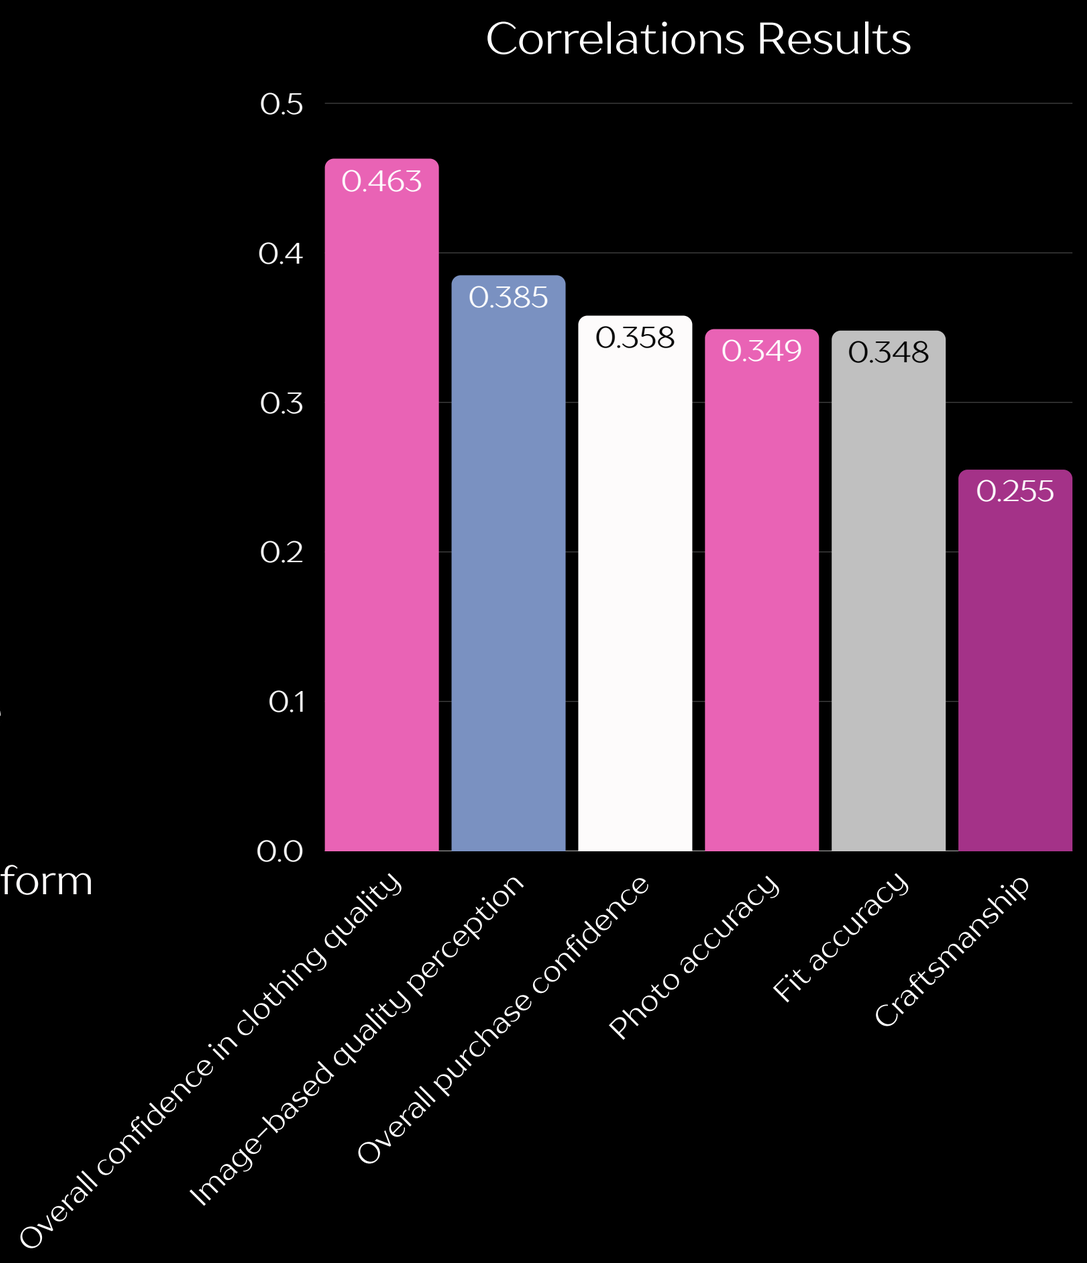
- Cambodian made products show strong craftsmanship had a slight correlation with purchase intention with an r-value of 0.255 and a p-value <.05.



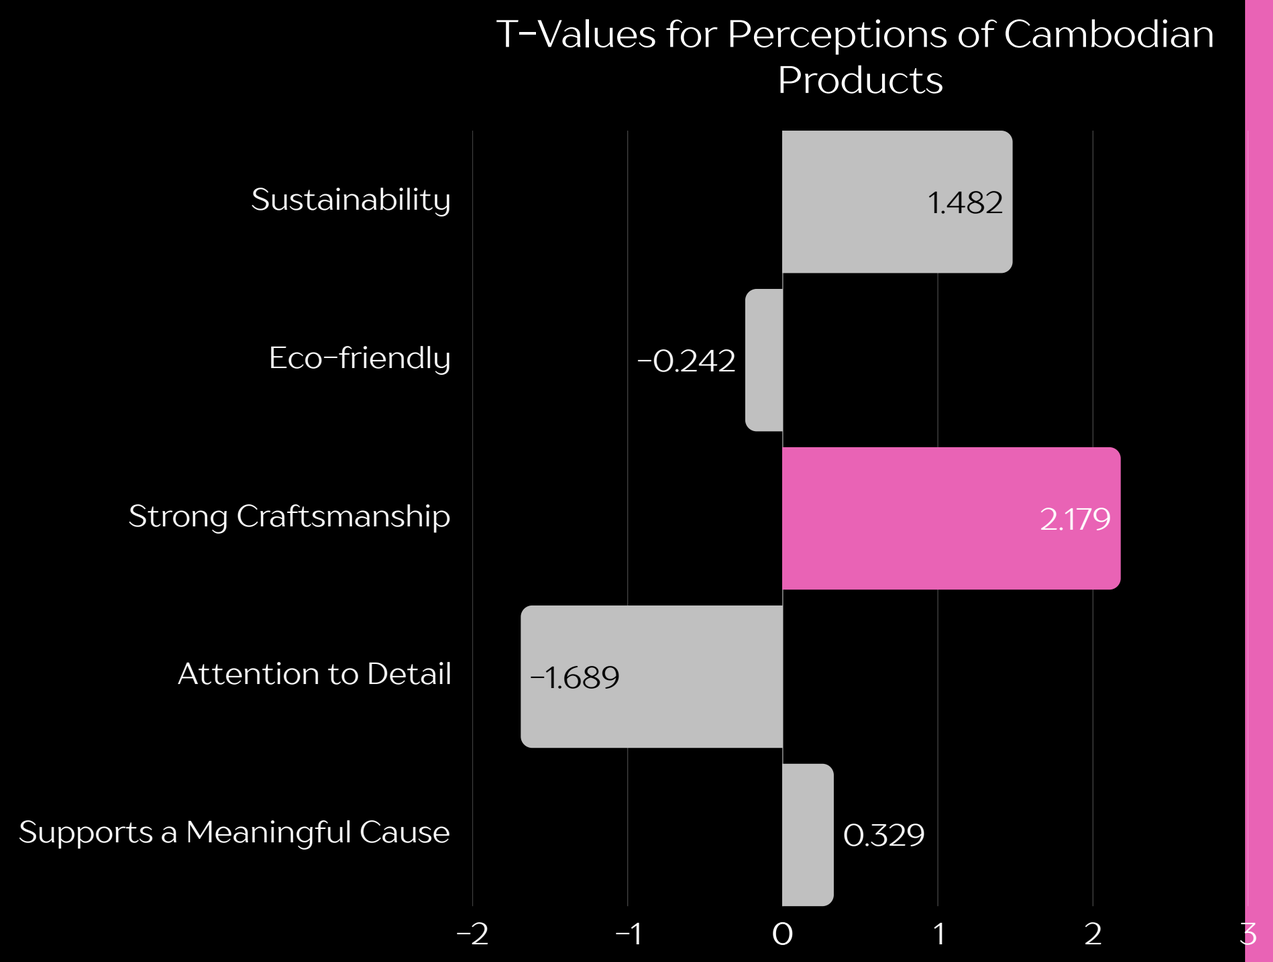
What are participants purchase intention?

- Based on these findings we recommend ReMade in Cambodia to focus their marketing strategy on showcasing:
- Quality demonstrated through clear visuals of the stitching, fabric, and other key garment details
- How the garments fit on body types and sizes
- Short stories of the Cambodian artisans behind the products on social media
- The upcycling and design techniques used to transform discarded textiles into new, creative fashion pieces



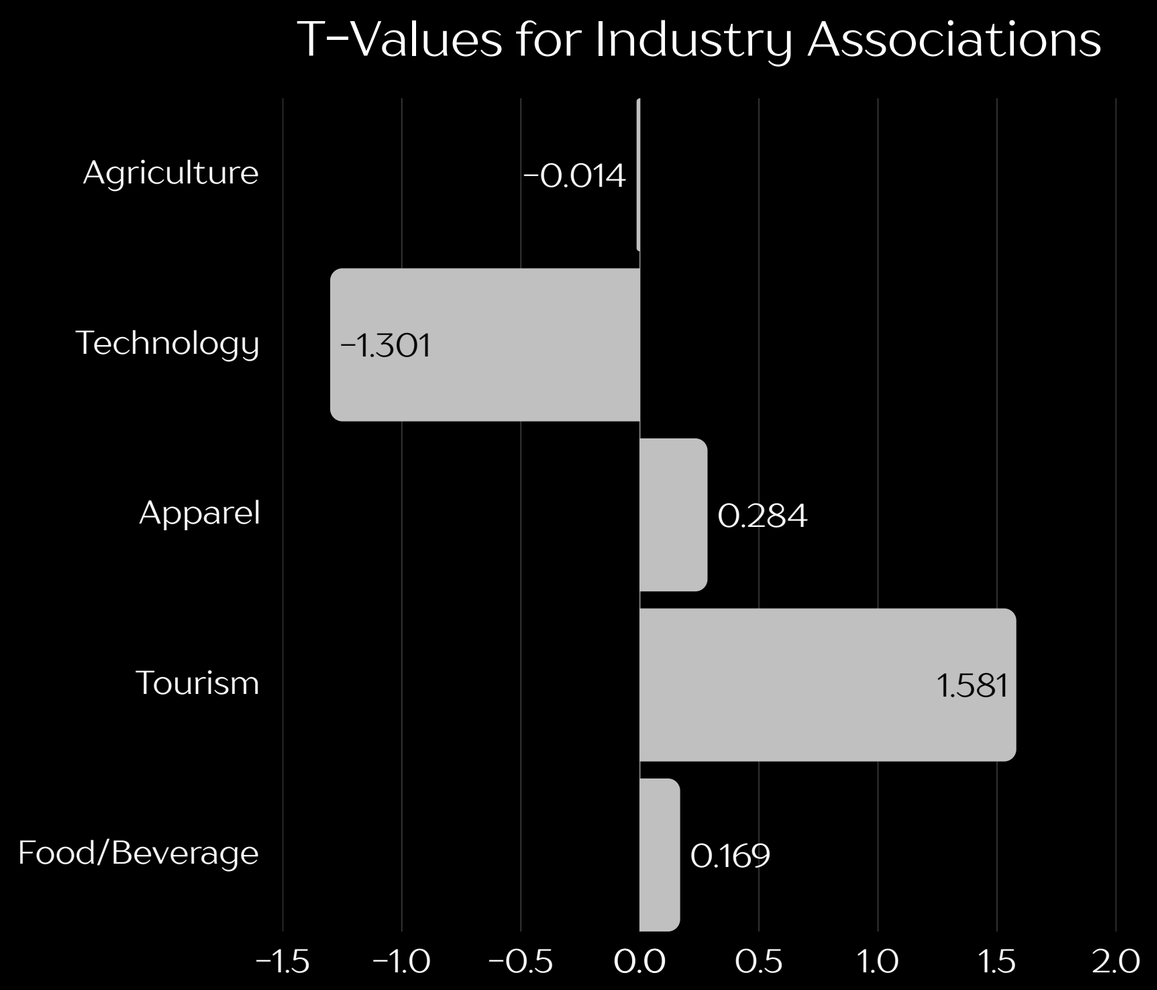
What perceptions make Cambodian brands more desirable?

- One significant predictor which is "Cambodian products show strong craftsmanship."
- Consumers who believe in the quality of Cambodian craftsmanship are more willing to choose ReMade in Cambodia over their current favorite brand.
- Explains 11.7% of the total variance. (R^2 = 0.117)
- It has the highest t-value of t = 2.179 and a p-value = 0.032 (less than 0.05).



What Industries do participants associate cambodia with?

- None of the individual industry associations were significant predictors, indicating that industry associations alone do not drive desirability for Cambodian apparel products.
- The model was not significant because F = 1.148 at p = 0.343
- Explains only 6.8% of the total variance. (R^2 = 0.068)
- We recommend focusing on quality of clothing, craftsmanship, and sustainable impact.



How Strongly Do Participants Associate Cambodian Brands With Each Industry?

- Fashion/Apparel: 43 ratings
- Tourism: 39 ratings
- Agriculture: 35 ratings
- Food/Beverage: 24 ratings (moderate)
- Technology: 13 ratings (low)
- Consumers already associate Cambodia to textiles, craftmanships, and cultural experiences

Recommendation:

- Remade should lean towards fashion and cultural craftsmanships, not tech. Highlighting artisanship, tradition, and heritage to match consumer current associations.
